THE CAMPBELL PROGRAM

The Religion and Philosophy department has been an integral part of the proud Campbell University tradition for more than 40 years. Our graduates have consistently performed well at the graduate level.

We offer both a B.A. degree in Christian Ministry and Religion with concentrations in Biblical Studies, Theology and Christian History. The Religion and Philosophy Department is a part of the Campbell University Divinity School, which offers programs leading to Master of Divinity and Master of Arts degrees.

The B.A. in Christian Ministry balances both a practical and an academic approach to the field of professional ministry. Our faculty members work to offer students a deeper understanding of the study of scriptures, the structure and history of the church and the care involved in reaching out to the world in the name of Jesus Christ. When possible, we invite representatives from various Christian organizations and ministries into our classes to offer insight into the unique road one travels when seeking to pursue the Great Commission as a professional focus. In our ministry-specific classes our students study under professors who have first-hand experience in the field. Since individual calls to ministry can be as diverse as the countless areas and people groups for which ministry is needed, our Religion department encourages students to seek hands-on experience beyond the classroom; to make this a reality, the department offers a constantly updated list of opportunities for service. Because the goals of our students may include continuing their education at the graduate level or entering a ministry profession upon completion of their degree, we strive to equip students for either pursuit.

THE CAMPBELL APPROACH

We use a wide variety of teaching methods to focus on biblical, historical and theological studies. Most of your classes will be relatively small, which allows for extensive interaction between students and professors. We encourage involvement in local churches and have a large number of ministry positions available for students interested in serving while in school.

THE CAMPBELL FACULTY

All the professors in this department are committed Christians who hold earned doctorates. They teach all classes—you won't have any classes led by assistants.

In addition, faculty members are quite active in North Carolina Baptist work, serving as much-sought-after worship leaders, writers and program speakers. They serve on editorial boards of significant religious journals and write articles often for Baptist publications.

You'll have open access to your academic adviser. The department's atmosphere is supportive, encouraging and accepting. In fact, many students think of our department as a "family" and continue their contact with faculty after graduation.

THE CAMPBELL STUDENT

Our students are those who feel called to church-related vocations as well as those who are interested in the field of Religion. They have a real interest in serving Christ and helping people. Many of our students pursue graduate studies immediately after graduation; the vast majority are accepted by their first-choice school.

The age range in our courses is wide: some of our majors are already employed, many in church-related work. We offer an aggressive program of ministry placement for current students and alumni. Our goal is to help the right minister and the right church connect.

THE CAMPBELL FINANCIAL OPPORTUNITY

A $1,000 scholarship is awarded to every Religion Department major.* This helps provide an affordable opportunity to obtain your degree from a well-respected program that offers superb career preparation.

This award will be superseded should the student receive a merit based scholarship.*

The Campbell Advantage

Our students become pastors, youth ministers, Christian counselors, missionaries, college/seminary teachers or pursue other denominational work. Regardless of your career plans after college, you will find majoring in Christian Ministry at Campbell can be a uniquely valuable experience because it features...

- A respected, friendly faculty deeply committed to ministry and to preparing you to fulfill your calling.
- A program which has demonstrated remarkable success at helping our students achieve their postgraduate educational and career goals.
- A distinctive dedication to quality liberal arts education, the pursuit of truth, and our Christian mission.
