THE CAMPBELL PROGRAM

Accredited by the Council of Social Work Education, the Social Work Department is a relatively new part of Campbell University's widely known School of Education. Our dynamic program is designed to prepare you for entry-level generalist practice in which you might work with individuals, families and groups, organizations or entire communities. About one-third of our majors pursue postgraduate studies and the vast majority of those are accepted by their first-choice school. For students who enter the job market immediately, our career placement record is especially strong: virtually all our majors have positions in their field when they graduate.

THE CAMPBELL APPROACH

We rely heavily on an integrated, interactive approach that emphasizes practical experience. For example, our Early Experience course gives you an opportunity to spend 65 hours during a semester in a human service agency. The setting will be chosen with your interest in mind: social services, mental health, nursing home/hospice, corrections, women's center or another agency.

In addition, you'll complete a field internship or practicum your senior year in conjunction with a senior seminar. The practicum involves 450 hours of experience in an approved social work agency and features extensive field work. Once again, you'll be matched with your specific area of interest.

We also arrange a variety of visits to agencies and invite community leaders to bring their insight to you in the classroom. There's also an award-winning Social Work student organization that is actively involved in community and campus service projects. In addition, our program has a social work honor society Phi Alpha Eta Kappa Chapter for students who excel in academics.

THE CAMPBELL FACULTY AND STUDENTS

Faculty in the Social Work Department take their teaching role quite seriously and are also extremely active participants in the field off-campus. For instance, Department Chairman Dr. C.G. Kledaras holds leadership positions in the NC Society for Clinical Social Work, NASW-NC Chapter along with other professional and community organizations. Dr. Eugene Sumner is actively involved in handling the practicum placements for the program and is also heavily involved in community projects. Because of all the time spent inside and outside of the classroom, our students feel very close to the faculty and their fellow majors.

Students attracted to this major have a deep commitment to helping people. They can assess a situation, provide a caring attitude and have an openness to helping clients determine their personal options. This tolerance and acceptance requires self-discipline, but these traits are components of the ethics and values prescribed by our profession.

The Campbell Advantage

As a Campbell student preparing for a fulfilling career in Social Work, you'll find...

- A respected, caring, friendly faculty determined to see that you have the skills, confidence, and experience you need to work in this highly satisfying career.
- A program that gives students a head start by requiring real-world experience in various areas of the field.
- A distinctive dedication to a quality liberal arts education, free enterprise, and our Christian Mission.
